

CHAMP CLARK DIES IN WASHINGTON

Veteran ex-Speaker, Democratic Leader and Almost Presidential Nominee, is No More

(By Associated Press)
Washington, D. C., March 2.—Champ Clark, former Speaker of the House of Representatives and Democratic leader, died at his home here this afternoon.

Story of His Life
In the Democratic national convention at Baltimore in 1912, Champ Clark led on 27 ballots for the nomination as candidate for president and had a clear majority on 9 ballots, prior to the final vote of Woodrow Wilson. The two-thirds rule of the convention alone prevented Mr. Clark's nomination. The honor which his party thus paid him was the most notable in his public life in American political history.

Mr. Clark was the only man who failed of the Democratic nomination after having received a majority of the votes in the national convention, but he enjoyed the unique distinction of being elected subsequently.

William J. Bryan's sensational attack on Mr. Clark at Baltimore, charging him with being affiliated with leaders representing the "interests," held the convention in deadlock for more than a week, when it ended in the nomination of Wilson. Bryan's speech, declaring that "Thomas E. Ryan, August Belmont and Charles F. Murphy were supporting Clark as a bolt from the blue which made the Clark ranks waver," The Clark supporters declared afterward that none of the three leaders mentioned were for Clark as first choice, but that the anti-rail carrier the New York delegate to the Clark forces.

The breach between Clark and Bryan never healed, although they met at luncheon arranged by mutual friends a few months later and exchanged preliminary speeches. Coolness between Clark and Wilson were of minor importance, but the anti-rail carrier the New York delegate to the Clark forces.

The failure of his candidacy at Baltimore never ceased to be the disappointment of Mr. Clark's life. He refused nomination as vice president and told the house on the eve of his defeat that he preferred to remain a speaker.

PROMINENT COLORED PREACHER IS DEAD

Rev. T. H. Broadbush, aged 80 years, one of the best known colored preachers in this section of the state, died at his home in this city, from an attack of pneumonia, about 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. His wife and five children survive, two sons and three daughters. Broadbush was one of the most prominent men of his race in Kentucky. He had been moderator of the Mt. Pleasant District Association since it was organized; he was a trustee of the Colored State University, at Louisville, a member of the State Inter-Racial Committee and otherwise prominent in all interests of his race. He worked for its good and upbuilding and his death is a distinct loss to the community.

Soviet Delegation Denies It, But Reports Creep Out of Bloody Battles On

(By Associated Press)
London, March 2.—Reports received in British official circles today confirm the dispatches telling of the anti-Soviet rising in Russia. They state the situation is serious. The latest official news, however, did not indicate the Soviet government had lost control.

London, March 2.—The Russian trade delegation here announced today it is in direct communication with Moscow and is authorized to deny rumors of a Russian revolution. It asserted they are "absolutely false" and "started for political purposes."

A Central News report today from Helsinki, Finland, by way of Riga, Estonia, however, declares fighting is proceeding in many parts of Russia with Petrograd and Moscow as centers. It declares it discloses a situation "which may result shortly in complete overthrow of Soviet rule." It declares the fighting in many parts of Russia with Petrograd and Moscow as centers. ## GEN. JAN CHRISTIAN SMUTS ON "WILSON'S PLACE IN HISTORY"

The following article by Gen. J. C. Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa, prepared by him for the New York Evening Post, is sent to the Daily Register with the compliments of the New York Evening Post.

General the Right Honorable Jan Christian Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa, served with President Wilson on the League of Nations commission of the peace conference.

Gen. Smuts was an active leader of the Boer army in the field in the Boer war. He is a graduate of Cambridge University in England, served as state attorney for the South African Republic, and was well known as a member of the bar at Cape Town.

Accepting the outcome of the Boer war, he entered the service of the British government, becoming colonial secretary for the Transvaal in 1907 and exercising a leading influence as a delegate in the national convention of 1910, which drew up the constitution for the present Union of South Africa.

He was minister of defense of the South African government, and commanded the troops in the campaign against the Germans in East Africa in 1916-17. Promoted to an honorary lieutenant general, he was the South African representative in the Imperial War cabinet in 1917-18. This led to his prominence in the peace conference and to his close contact with President Wilson.

On February 8th of this year, Premier Smuts and the South African party won a decisive victory at the polls over Gen. Botha and those who advocated the secession of South Africa from the British empire.

Woodrow Wilson's Place in History
(By General the Right Honorable Jan Christian Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa.)
Pretoria, South Africa, January 8, 1921.

It has been suggested that I should write a short estimate and appraisal of the work of President Wilson on the termination of his presidency of the United States of America. I feel I must comply with the suggestion. I feel I may not remain silent when there is an opportunity to say a word of appreciation for the work of one who with me I came into close contact at a great period and who rendered the most signal service to the great human cause.

There is a great saying of Donatien (I believe) in reference to the close of Hannibal's career in failure and eclipse. "On those whom the gods have favored, they have laid a heavy burden." It has come back to my mind in reference to the close of Wilson's career. For a few brief moments he was not only the leader of the greatest state in the world; he was raised to a higher heights and became the center of the world's infinite hope and faith. And he was not only the leader of the greatest state in the world; he was raised to a higher heights and became the center of the world's infinite hope and faith.

What is the explanation of this tremendous tragedy, which is not only American, but which concerns the whole world? Of course, there are purely American elements in the explanation, which I am not competent to speak on. But besides the American quarrel with President Wilson there is something to be said on the great and far-reaching issue. On these I may be permitted to say a few words.

The position occupied by President Wilson in the world's imagination at the close of the great war and at the beginning of the peace conference was terrible in its greatness. It was a position for any man. Probably to no human being in all history did the hopes, the prayers, the aspirations of so many millions of his fellow men with such poignant intensity as to him at the close of the war. At a time of the deepest darkness and despair, he had raised aloft a flag to which all eyes had turned. He had spoken divine words of healing and consolation to a broken humanity. His lofty moral idealism seemed for a moment to dominate the brutal passion which had torn the world asunder. And he was supposed to possess the secret which would remake the world on fairer lines. The peace which Wilson was bringing to the world was expected to be God's peace. Prussianism crushed; brute force had fallen utterly. Moral character of the universe had been restored. It was a new era. There was a universal vague hope of a great moral peace, of a new world order arising visibly and immediately on the ruins of the old. This hope was not a mere superficial sentiment. It was the intense expression at the end of the war of the inner moral and spiritual force which had upheld the peoples during the dark night of the war and had served them to an effort almost beyond human strength. Surely, surely, God had been with them in that long night agony. He was the victor. His should be the peace. And President Wilson was looked upon as the man to make this great peace. He had voiced the great ideals of the new order; his great utterances had become the contractual bases for the armistice and the peace. The idealism of Wilson would surely become the reality of the new order of things in the peace treaty.

In this atmosphere of extravagant, almost frenzied expectation he arrived at the peace conference. Without hesitation he plunged into that inferno of human passions. He went down into the pit like a second Hercules to break the fair Alceste of the world's desire. There were six months of agonizing waiting during which the world situation rapidly deteriorated. And then he emerged with the peace treaty. It was not a Wilson treaty, and he made a fatal mistake in somehow giving the impression that the peace was in accord with his fourteen points and his various declarations. Not so the world had understood him. This was a Punic peace, the same sort of peace as the victor had dictated to the vanquished for thousands of years.

WOODROW WILSON

It was not Albertus, it was a haggard, unshaven man with features distorted by withered, greed and selfishness, and the little child that the woman carried was equally deformed. Yet it was for the saving of the child that Wilson had labored until he was a physical wreck. Let our other great statesmen and leaders enjoy their well-earned honors for their unquestioned services at Paris. To Woodrow Wilson, the great hope died in their hands. The great disillumination took its place. The most receptive mood for a new start the world had been in for centuries passed away. Faith in their goodness and leaders was largely destroyed, and the foundations of human government were shaken in a way which will be felt for generations. The Paris peace lost an opportunity as unique as the great war itself, in destroying the moral idealism born of the sacrifice of war. It did almost as much as the war itself in shattering the structure of western civilization.

And the nation for which this sacrifice on President Wilson, round him the hopes had centered, round him the disillusion and despair now gathered. Popular opinion largely held him responsible for the bitter disappointment and grievous failure. The sympathy his friends were silenced by the universal disappointment. Little anything had been expected from the other leaders; the whole failure was laid to the account of Woodrow Wilson. And finally America for reasons best known to the people and at the end it was his own people who tore him to pieces.

Will this judgment, born of momentary disillusion and disappointment stand in future, or will it be reversed? The time has not come to pass final judgment on either Wilson or any of the other great leaders in this dark period. The present estimate will be done largely on the interpretation of had drama in the course of time. As one who saw and watched things from the inside I feel convinced that the present popular estimates are largely superficial and will not stand the test of time. And I have no doubt whatever that Wilson has been unfairly, unjustly dealt with and that he has been made a scapegoat for the sins of others. Wilson made mistakes, and there were occasions when I ventured to sound a warning note. But it was not this mistake that caused the failure for which he has been held mainly responsible.

Let us admit the truth, however bitter it is to do so for those who believe in human nature. The positions are far more serious. It was the human spirit itself that failed at Paris. It is no use speaking of goodness and making scapegoats of this or that individual statesman or group of statesmen. Idealism, make a great mistake in not facing the real facts sincerely and resolutely. They believe in the power of the spirit, in the goodness which is at the heart of things, in the triumph which is in store for the great moral ideals of the race. But this faith only too often leads to an optimism which is sadly and fatally at variance with actual results. It is the realist and not the idealist who is generally justified by events. We forget that the human spirit, the spirit of goodness and truth in the world, is still only an infant crying in the night, and that the struggle with darkness is as yet mostly an unequal struggle.

Paris proved this terrible truth over and over. It was not Wilson who failed there, but humanity itself. It was not the statesmen who failed, so much as the spirit of the peoples behind them. The hope, the aspiration for a new world order of peace and right and justice—however deeply and universally felt—was utterly feeble and unavailing in comparison with the dominant national passions which found their expression in the peace treaty. Even if Wilson had been one of the great demi-gods of the human race, he could not have saved the peace. Knowing the peace conference as I knew it from within, I feel convinced in my own mind that not the greatest man born of woman in the history of the race would have saved the situation. The great hope was not the heralding of the coming dawn, as the peoples thought, but only a dim imitation of some far-off event towards which we shall yet have to make many a long weary march. Sincerely as we believed in the moral ideals for which we had fought, the temptation at Paris of a large body to be divided proved too great. And in the end not only the leaders but the people preferred a bit of booty here, a strategic frontier there, a coal field or an oil well, an addition to their population or their resources—to all the faint allurements of the ideal. As I said at the time, the real peace was still to come, and it could only come from a new spirit in the peoples themselves.

What was really saved at Paris was the child—the covenant of the League of Nations. The political realists who had their eyes on the loot were prepared, however reluctantly, to throw that innocent little son to President Wilson and his fellow idealists. After all, there was not much harm in it, it threatened to present national interest, and it gave great pleasure to a number of good impractical people in most countries. Above all, President Wilson had to be conciliated, and this was the last and the greatest of the fourteen points on which he had set his heart and by which he was determined to stand or to fall. And so he let his way. But it is a fact that only a man of his great vision and influence and dogged determination could have carried the covenant through the peace conference. Others had seen with him the great vision, others perhaps had given more thought to the elaboration of the great plan. But his was the power and the will that carried it through. The covenant is Wilson's son, and to the future of the world. No one will ever deny him that honor.

The honor is very great, indeed, for the covenant is one of the great creative documents of human history. The peace treaty will fade into moribund oblivion, and its provisions will be gradually obliterated by the great human tides sweeping over the world. But the covenant will stand as sure as fate. Forty-two nations gathered around it at the first meeting of the League at Geneva. And the day is not far off when all the free peoples of the world will gather round it. It must succeed, because there is no other way for the future of civilization. It does not realize the great hopes born of the war, but it provides the only method and instrument by which the hopes of the future can be realized. Speaking as one who has some right to speak on the fundamental conceptions, objects and methods of the covenant, I feel sure that most of the criticism is based on misunderstandings. Those misunderstandings will clear away, one by one, the peoples still outside the covenant will fall in behind this banner, under which the human race is going to march forward to triumphs of a peaceful organization and achievement, and the day is not far off when all the free peoples of the world will gather round it. And the leader who, in spite of apparent failure, succeeded in achieving the most enviable and enduring immortality. Americans of the future will yet proudly and gratefully look him with Washington and Lincoln, and his name will have a more universal significance than theirs.

The Kentucky State Experiment Station had a very interesting exhibit with a large supply of literature on breeding, etc., in charge of A. C. Chaplin, Kentucky wonderman in standardization work.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Red Club was held on Tuesday evening in the rest room, which was built in the center of the armory, with twenty members of the Red Club present. The following officers were unanimously elected to serve through the coming year: President, Len Rawnsley, St. Matthews; vice president, Henry G. Saams, Louisville; secretary, treasurer, C. L. Ingraham, Louisville. Other vice presidents elected to represent the various sections of the state were as follows:

Mrs. R. C. Coomer, Speedwell; Mrs. E. W. Lemon, Benton; Mrs. J. A. Ellison, Verona; Arthur Smith, New Castle. The idea being for these vice presidents to look after the interests of the Club in their sections.

FARM PRICES BACK ON PRE-WAR BASIS

Drop in Markets Severely Felt by Farmers—Expert Thinks Bottom is Reached

(By Associated Press)

Lexington, Ky., March 2.—Recent declines in farm prices have resulted in quotations on many farm products returning to a pre-war level, according to figures which have been compiled by O. B. Jesness, chief of the section of markets of the State College of Agriculture. According to Mr. Jesness, the adjustment from war to pre-war prices has come more rapidly than most people anticipated and has resulted in a reduction of the farmers' purchasing power by five or six million dollars as compared to this time in 1920.

According to the figures, the average price of beef steers on the Chicago market during 1910 was $6.83 per hundred pounds. In 1914 this rose to $8.65 while conditions brought about by the war caused the average to mount to $15.45. The decline of recent months has brought the price back to about $9. During 1914 the average price of hogs at the Chicago market was $8.30, according to the figures compiled by Mr. Jesness. This rose to $18.14 during 1919, but the bulk of the sales on the Chicago market are now near $9 per hundred. Lamb prices have also slumped to a 1916 level, he added.

Corn and oats have dropped back to about the level existing before the war, according to Mr. Jesness, while wheat is still above this level. Egg prices, which for several months showed more strength than most farm products, recently suffered a severe decline, wholesale prices dropping 44 cents in three weeks. Tobacco growers, cotton farmers, wool growers and producers of other farm products have experienced staggering declines in the price of their products.

The nature of the farming business, according to Mr. Jesness, has made the change in prices more severely felt by this class of men than in many other lines.

Predictions concerning future farm prices cannot be made with any assurance of accuracy because of the complexity and the number of factors involved, the market expert said. The biggest decline in farm products, in his opinion, has taken place. Lowering prices of supplies and equipment needed on the farm will help bring about the lower cost of production which is necessary to restore the balance between prices and production costs, he concluded.

CHAMP CLARK DEAD

life he reduced this to Champ Clark. His first work was as a farm hand, clerk in a general store and on a country newspaper.

He was educated at Kentucky University and Bethany College and the Cincinnati Law School. For a short time he was president of Marshall College, and at 22 held the record of being the youngest college president in the United States. In 1857 he moved to Missouri, where he took up the study and practice of law, and became prosecuting attorney in Pike county. His next step was into the Missouri legislature, where he framed the Missouri primary law, an anti-trust statute and an Australian ballot law. He was permanent chairman of the Democratic national convention at St. Louis in 1904 and headed the committee that notified Alton B. Parker of his presidential nomination.

He was first sent to the national forum in 1893. Although when regarded as "green," his strength in the house developed rapidly. When John Sharp Williams left the house for the senate, Kevo-sentative Clark was made minority leader by virtue of his seniority on the Ways and Means Committee which drafted the Payne-Aldrich tariff act, in service on that committee in trying to keep duties down won him the regard of the Democrats and his speech of five hours against the bill was one of the notable addresses of that congress.

Mr. Clark's sincerity, friendship for opponents and adherents alike, his fairness as a presiding officer and his knowledge of history, his love of clean anecdotes and his marvelous retentive memory ranked him with his attributes of leadership. He welded the minority into a virtual Democratic unit when he was minority leader, and after the onsting of Cannon, which robbed the speakership of many of its powers, he divided with Majority Leader Underwood the control of the Democrats in the house and they formed a great working team.

Physically he was a giant of a man, standing over six feet two inches in height and weighing a trifle more than 200 pounds.

Speaker Clark and Mrs. Clark, a familiar figure in the speaker's bench in the gallery, entertained not only at an annual New Year's house and at other functions, but gave informal luncheons at the capital to which members and others were invited. Genevieve Clark, who was engaged to James M. Thompson, a New Orleans newspaper editor, was announced in the waning days of the 63rd congress, and Bennett Clark, parliamentarian of the house at the speaker's appointment, whom the speaker hoped to have succeed to his seat in congress, comprised the rest of the immediate family.

IN THE MOVIES

"The Chicken in the Case" with Owen Moore is another of his delightful comedy characterizations will be the feature photoplay attraction at the local theatres tonight, and the patrons of this theatre who will attend may safely anticipate a merry evening.

The story is one that has been constructed for comedy purposes only, and it would not be strange if it achieved as great a vogue as did "Charley's Aunt," some years ago. It's all about a young man who, in order to secure an inheritance, pretends to be married; the wife of his pal, Percy Jones, being the "chicken in the case." The efforts of the young man to keep up the deception and the strenuous efforts of his Aunt Sarah, who thinks the young couple are becoming estranged thru a bold interloper, who is really the young wife's own husband, create a series of comedy situations that would bring a smile to the stolid face of the Sphinx.

Dinner Party For Mr. and Mrs. Turley.

Mr. and Mrs. Turley who are guests of their son, Major Turley and wife in Panama, are enjoying the many social functions given at Fort Amador, as the following clippings from the society sheet of the Panama paper will show:

One of the largest and loveliest of the dinners given Sunday night was that of Major and Mrs. Turley, who are one of the very popular young couples stationed at Fort Amador. Mrs. Turley who is of the type that Gibson delights in, slender, willowy, antipatrically pretty, wore a charming black gown with touch of turquoise in the corsage. The oblong table with a silver bowl of tube roses and colored flowers at each end, was most attractive and a delicious menu was served to the Turley's guests, who were Colonel and Mrs. Steele, Colonel and Mrs. Arthur Brown, Colonel and Mrs. Hicks, Major and Mrs. Goddard, Mrs. Rittenhouse, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Brunker, Mrs. Turnbull, Mrs. H. H. Price, the Hon. W. J. Price, the Hon. Constantine Graham, and Lt. Thee and Lt. Warren.

This is our lucky week for there are so many delightful people here now. Major and Mrs. Turley are entertaining a very delightful couple—the father and mother of Major Turley, who are with the Turley's at Amador.

There is a great deal of attractive entertaining for the many charming people gathered here Monday evening the American American Minister was the host for a dinner at which he entertained very delightfully Mr.

Morrow and Miss Alice Morrow of New York, who are the mother and sister of Gov. Morrow; Mrs. King Swope, of Danville, Ky.; Mrs. Richards, the mother of Mrs. Swope, Morganton, Ky.; Mrs. Burick, of Newport, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Turley, of Richmond, Ky.; Judge Blackburn and Major Goldwaite. Lovely adena de amor was the pretty, tropical touch given the dinner table and after the feast was over he guests were entertained on the roof garden of the legation like so many fireflies in the from which there was a perfect view of the ships at anchor in the bay. Their twinkling lights look-stance, was a more than pretty light and an attractive ending to a delightful evening.

Miss Effie Elkin, of Clark county, was the guest of friends here last week.

Mr. E. H. Minney has been confined to his home for several days by illness, his many friends will regret to know.

Mrs. R. C. Hoeker and daughter, Miss Mary Catherine, of Stanford, have returned home after a visit to relatives here.

"WE ARE GROWING"

Spring Millinery in Gay Mood

SPRINGTIME this year finds its enlivening millinery in a gay and sportive mood, with strictly feminine ideas expressed in hats that refuse to be severely plain—no matter what their mission may be. This is a broad and general summing up of the character of spring hats—to be taken with a few reservations—but it is true that everything that will bear decorating is decorated. There is a return to flowers, fruits, lace, foliage, ribbons and even jewels, and added to these all the new shiny fabrics and glittering braids that lend so much sparkle to headwear. Nevertheless, hats are beautiful, and there is much veiling of them with lace or veils.

In the group of hats for spring shown here there are two dress hats, one demidress and one street hat that may be taken as criterions. None of them is extreme in style, and therefore, all of them are practical; they entitle their wearers to feel well dressed. The hat at the upper left of the group has a soft crown of "candy" cloth, a fabric that has a very high luster, and an upturned brim covered with flowers. The flower brim is veiled with black chantilly lace which falls below the eyes and makes a bow with hanging loops and ends at the right side. This veiling of the eyes is in great favor just now.

The close-fitting turban at the right has a brief but checkered story, being made up of velvet rose foliage in several lovely and lively colors. It is a simple affair that will give much service. Below it is a pretty hat with crown of rose petals and brim of black lace, finished with ribbon that is folded into a narrow sash about the crown, which it slips through at the back to fall in a bow over the nape of the neck. Finally, a beautiful sailor of fine milan reflects the gaiety of the season by its color, which is watermelon pink. It has a band of white silk, bound with straw, which departs from the straight and narrow way of bands and becomes more decorative with small straw ornaments to stop its wanderings, and fasten it to the hat.

Street hats have followed the trend of suits and one-piece frocks in their departure from severely plain styles; even sports hats are trimmed, but the trimming is of a character to suit them, and distinctly different from that which adorns tailored models. In considering spring millinery—especially in the tailored and demidress classes, veils must not be overlooked. Some of the best of the new models would be failures without them.

West Virginia Woman Says Nearly Everybody Around Her Home Is Taking Tanlac After What It Did For Her—Gained Twenty Pounds.

A few weeks ago I made a visit to my old home for the first time in two years and my friends were amazed to see how much better I was looking," said Mrs. J. L. Long, corner of 16th and Walnut street, Kenova, W. Va. "I have actually gained twenty pounds in weight and nearly everybody around my old home has been taking Tanlac since they saw how much it has done for me. "For about six years I had been unable to eat a thing without suffering afterwards. At times my heart would palpitate so from the gas on my stomach that I had to stop and sit down. I was so nervous any unusual noise would almost set me wild, and my head sometimes ached like it was bursting and I had spells of dizziness. "I got so weak and run down I was not able to do any of my housework and last winter influenza left me so weak I could hardly get about. But since taking Tanlac I eat whatever I please and nothing hurts me. My nerves are calm and steady and I never suffer any more from headaches or dizziness. My husband got a bottle of Tanlac for himself, as his stomach had been in bad condition, and now he is feeling fine. As for me, I just feel like I had never had a sick day in my life." Tanlac is sold in Richmond by Stockton and Son; in College Hill by Ginter Brothers; in Berea by Welch Department Stores. It

"SOUL OF YOUTH" CONTEST LETTERS

Richmond, Ky., Feb. 25, 1921.
Miss Ward: The happiest moment of my young life was one Christmas morning when I got up at 5 o'clock. I found a large double bed. It was a very large wagon. I hope I will win the prize and I will be a happy boy. Robert Ricci, 10, Smith-Ballard street.

The happiest moment of my young life, as I recall, was one frosty morning, November 11, 1918, when bells began to toll, whistle began to blow and everybody was engaged in a jolly time, for the news had spread all over the state stating the armistice had been signed, and the dreadful war, which had taken so many of our friends and relatives, had ceased, and liberty was once more among the peace-preserving nations. Leota McKinney, 11, 338 K street.

The happiest moment of my young life was when I earned my first dollar by thinning corn and then gave 25 cents of it to join the Junior Red Cross of the Caldwell High school. J. O. Wilson, 220 Third street.

Dear Miss Ward: The happiest moment of my young life was when I was on a picnic. We went boat riding and also fishing. We had a swell dinner which everyone enjoyed. In the afternoon we had races and played baseball. I will close, hoping that everyone will see "The Soul of Youth," because it is going to be a great picture. Venci Ricci, 12.

WRIGLEY'S RULE FOR RESULTS

What William Wrigley doesn't know about advertising will have to be learned later. He took a nickel's worth of merchandise, added manufacturing skill, added selling genius, then added advertising.

And William Wrigley has chewing-gummed a flock of fancy fortunes out of the simple rule that he states thus:

"Tell 'em quick and tell 'em often. Advertising is like running a furnace—you've got to keep on shoveling coal. Once you stop stoking the fire goes out."

You notice that William Wrigley does not let the fire go out.

Persistence is every successful advertiser's middle name.

AUTHENTIC STORIES FROM THE OIL FIELDS

They Read Like Fiction and Extracts From the Funny Pages—But They Are Vouched For.

Most workers have only one way of earning money, but every worker has hundreds and thousands of ways of spending it. The familiar and well marked road of earning is, easy enough to follow but it is difficult not to become confused and follow the wrong turning at the cross roads and the corners of spending.

The recent oil excitement in Texas has opened some queer paths before the feet of unaccustomed spenders according to stories coming from that state. No other town of similar size has sold as many silk shirts as Dallas since the oil excitement began according to these stories.

"I want a diamond for ma, here," said a new oil magnate to a jewelry salesman the other day.

"What sort of a diamond?" asked the salesman.

"I judge I want one about the size of a nickel," said the new oil magnate. "The lady on the next ranch to me got one that was mighty near that big and I wanta outdo her."

One of the new millionaires finds amusement in riding around all alone in a shiny limousine with a bright light lit over his head. So long as there is anyone on the street to see him, he is driven up and down. He never asks anyone to ride with him.

One woman who was almost swamped under a flood of the new easy money still continues to run a boarding house, but she is worried sick because she is getting money in so fast she cannot loan it out any more.

Of one couple it is related that when their first royalties came in the old man went to his wife. "We're rich now, ma," said he. "I'll get you anything you want now, no matter what it costs." The old lady deliberated for a long time and finally decided:

"Well, pa, I think I'd like to have a new axe."

One farmer was taken to an asylum the other day. He had been crazy for a long time, but he was now sane. He had been told that new rich guests often are unable to sleep at nights so worried are they over how they shall spend their money or for fear their new wealth will suddenly take wings.

These stories often seem far fetched and absurd, but the illogical and wasteful spending of money which they instance, is being paralleled daily in almost every community in the country. Equally reckless spending is being carried on not only by persons who have newly acquired wealth but by wage earners and people of moderate means as well. Many who find amusement in the spending antics of the new and puzzled Texas millionaire are following the same devious paths of extravagant spending and ill advised investment even if it be upon a different scale.

Yet security and enjoyment are open to the thrifty class through wise spending, saving and safe investment. Government securities offer security and profit for the funds of all, no matter how great or small. Thrift Stamps, War Savings Stamps, Treasury Savings Certificates and Liberty Bonds are adapted to the investment of any amount. They offer a safe broad highway for the dollars which certainly would become lost in the tangled paths of extravagance.

A THRIFT GARDEN

By CAROLINE McCARTY.

Take your pennies for the seed, Twenty-five is all you need. Buy a Thrift Stamp—get a card—Paste it on there good and hard.

Then save up till you've another Paste it, too, beside his brother. Keep on pasting one by one Till blank spaces there are none.

Uncle Sam will tend and hoe them; He's the gardener that can grow them. Harvest sure—his crops never fail—None who trust him need be wail.

Just to plant is all you do, The rest he gladly does for you. Keep them growing slow and steady, Can you when the crop is ready.

An Embarrassing Question

Campton, Ky., March 2.—A message was received by Leck Montgomery from his 19 year old wife's mother, who lives in Georgia, saying that the body had been and asking what was the cause of the death and why he did not accompany the body home. Montgomery's father and brothers replied: "Leck killed her and is now in the Wolfe county jail insane." They said that a letter was pinned to the dead woman's clothes, giving particulars of the killing. The trial of the slayer is on in circuit court.
